Smiles and handshakes: the campaign has begun

BYUSA elections are here again, but students shouldn't expect them to be much like last year. Much has changed since Mike Lee took office last spring.

Unlike years past, candidates were not chosen by a selections committee. Before, BYU officials decided up choosing who could run, instead of having students run on their own initiative. Now, candidates need only meet grade, service and meeting attendance requirements. The decision of who will represent them is now up to the students.

Students won't fill out ballots as they have in the past; instead, they'll call in their votes on the telephone registration system.

Also different this year, candidates for president and vice president are running on the same ticket, with the hope that those who end up winning the election will have the same platform and goals.

Students who want to know more about the 10 people who want to represent them as student leaders can come to debates that start today at 3 p.m. at the Cougarreat.

Phone system used for BYUSA voting

By EMILY SELDEN
Universe Staff Writer

Students can now place their BYUSA votes without leaving the house due to the introduction of phone voting.

In fact, all voting is done over the phone lines, BYUSA officials said.

Students need to enter the number of their student ID, followed by their PIN, then their election code (95 star) and their credit hours as three digits, followed by star (must be correct) (14.5=145, 9=090).

After the vote, the process is completed, and data regarding the vote will be sent to the computer system.

Compared to a student listing to ensure accuracy of social security numbers and credit hours. Votes are being to students whose information does not match up will not be counted, he said.

Students make errors when voting by phone, there is a number they can call to correct their vote. Lucero said that the reason for the double check on students identities is to ensure that the votes are legitimate.

Voters' identities will be saved on the computer system not only to count votes, but also to analyze which segments of the student body are voting, Lucero said.

HOW TO VOTE BY PHONE

1. Call 378-5111
2. Enter your student ID, followed by #
3. Enter your PIN, then #
4. Enter election code (95 star)
5. Enter your credit hours as three digits, followed by star (must be correct) (14.5=145, 9=090)
6. Enter candidate choice stickers on the back which were marked once a student voted, but the new cards cannot be marked, he said.

Lucero said that other options to replace the voting system were explored, but a student suggested they try the phone system.

New elections process now more objective

By HEATHER MCDONALD
Universe Staff Writer

BYUSA elections have definitely changed this year, and BYU officials say the changes will cause the elections to be more objective.

"The election process is not a mystery code any longer," said Tamara M. Quick, managing director of Student Leadership Development.

An outline of specific qualifications for candidate eligibility has replaced unclear standards applied by the nominations committee in the past, Quick said.

"This is the first year we can say that we did not deny anyone the opportunity to run," said David Lucero, coordinator of Student Leadership Development and adviser to the elections and member of the credentials committee.

The changes in election policies were designed to give BYU students the responsibility of evaluating the candidates, Quick said.

Mike Lee, BYUSA president, predicts this shift of responsibility will result in an increased voter turnout.

The nomination committee was eliminated last October. Students who met basic requirements that were reviewed by a credentials committee were eligible to run.

"We now have objective criteria rather than a subjective list of notions of what is leadership," Lee said.

Student Leadership Development officials say each of the candidates have fulfilled the following requirements:

- Support the Honor Code and dress and grooming standards
- Have an ecclesiastical endorsement
- Have a minimum 3.0 cumulative GPA

•Be a full-time BYU student during the election and during the fall and winter semesters while in office

•Serve two semesters in BYUSA as a program director, vice president, assistant or associate vice president, executive director or SAC representative

•Take part in a mandatory training seminar and assist in an election committee to create election rules

Lucero said the service requirement was the one that involved discussion. There are different opinions on what constitutes sufficient levels of service, he said.

For example, there are situations where a candidate has done service, but lacks the necessary position.

"This issue will be looked at again for next year," he said. "This year all candidates met that criteria."

Different from last year, the BYUSA president and SAC vice president are running on the same ticket. Before, the SAC vice president was chosen by the council and other vice presidents by the president himself.

Lee said the change was made to alleviate contention that has emerged in the past when the SAC vice president and BYUSA president had different agendas.

"By electing a team, students will be better represented by a pair that has a consistent philosophy," he said.

The credentials committee is comprised of three random students, two SAC representatives, two BYUSA officers, a Daily Universe editor and the student leadership development coordinator assigned to supervise the elections.

Candidates to debate BYU issues

By TIFFANY ZWEIFEL
Universe Staff Writer

BYU students can vote in primary elections for BYUSA president and Student Advisory Council vice president starting Tuesday, election officials announced.

Candidate debates will start today from 3 to 4 p.m. at the Cougarreat, said Heidi Burgon, student head of election committee events.

The candidates will be questioned by members of the University Presidency Committee, BYUSA President Mike Lee, Daily Universe opinion editor Tracy Helmer and a group of randomly selected students.

Several debates will be held until Feb. 15, and final elections will be Feb. 16 and 17, she said.

In past years, candidate debates for BYUSA positions focused on who should run for office.

This year, the debates will allow students to hear the issues, Burgon said.

"Because the candidates are running because they want to and not because they were elected, they have the experience that causes them to want to make changes," said Burgon. "Therefore, debates will focus on those changes and students will be able to make more educated choices."

In the past, faculty members nominated the candidates, she said.

At the debates, students will be able to write their questions to the candidates on a piece of paper and a moderator will ask the questions at the debate, Burgon said.

Another debate on Tuesday at 4 p.m. will be open to all students, but only Student Advisory Council vice presidents can ask questions, she said.

Debates for residents of Deseret Towers and Heleman Halls will be

Christensen to concentrate on academic support programs of BYUSA

By REBECCA REEVES
Universe Staff Writer

Jason Christensen, 23, a senior international relations major from Bountiful, has volunteered with BYUSA for two years and wants to be elected president because he enjoys it and he thinks he'd do a good job. "I've seen all the candidates and I think we're all qualified. But I think I can do just as good a job as any of them," he said. Christensen's running mate is Dave to other times so officers could use those hours to be more accessible to Walburger, 25, an honors molecular biology major from Silverton, Ore.

A big issue seems to be how BYUSA can better meet student needs. Christensen said that right now there are a lot of meetings scheduled between 3 and 5 in the afternoons when BYUSA representatives are supposed to be available to students. He said he would change meetings making better use of public relations and advertising to let students know the programs are there and how the programs could benefit them. Another way he wants to improve the academic programs is through a student advisors program where upperclass students are paired with freshmen students to help the students with tutoring, scheduling, and any other academic problems they might have.

He also wants to break down the perception of a BYUSA clique. He said Mike Lee changed the BYUSA logo to "For all of us" but it needs to be more focused so people realize that BYUSA is not elitist and everyone can be a part of it.

Christensen put in his involvement form three times before he got a position at BYUSA. He said that's another thing he'd like to change. Since then, he's been program director for Fall Fling 1992 and program director trainer.

For the past year he's served as associate vice president for resources. "He's very, very responsible," said Trip Meredith, vice president for administration.

He said Christensen has had a high rate of turnover in his office and had to hold down the office by himself.

The last book Christensen read for fun was Richest Man in Babylon, a gift from his father.

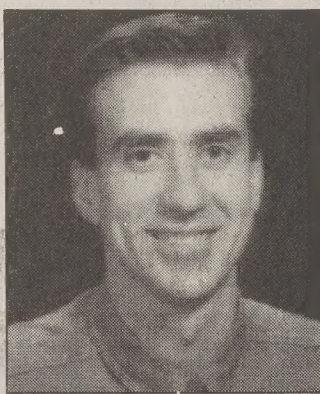

If he had an eighth day of the week he'd save it all up and collect it summer "so I could go to Europe."

On his mission, he had a very embarrassing moment when he was talking to some friends and they asked him if anything was wrong. He thought he told them "there's a problem" but actually said "I have a VD" instead.

Walburger to make SAC reps more accessible to students

By REBECCA REEVES
Universe Staff Writer

David Walburger, 25, a junior majoring in honors molecular biology from Silverton, Ore., is running for Student Advisory Council vice president because "I see the Student Advisory Council as the single most possible way a student can have his concerns addressed."

DAVID WALBURGER

He also said he thinks SAC should make better use of the media. He would like to have pictures of SAC representatives put up on every college bulletin board and have representatives hand out business cards that would be more convenient for students to keep instead of handing out flyers or posting flyers around the Wilkinson Center.

"I think it's important that the vice president be a representative of SAC," he said.

Walburger has a lot of experience working with SAC. He is currently a representative for the College of Biology and Agriculture. He was chair of a SAC committee to reduce student illnesses, and as part of that was on the University's communicable diseases committee. He was also on a committee to reform housing policies and worked for more security in student apartment complexes.

Walburger couldn't remember what the last book he read for fun was. He said it was either The Inspiration of Einstein or Believing Christ.

If he had an eighth day of the week, he'd "get done all the stuff I never have time to do"

When he was nine years old, Walburger had a Shetland pony named Trigger who didn't like him. One day he had all his friends and relatives over and he let them all ride Trigger, but when he went to ride the horse, it bucked him off and he landed in the middle of a cow pie.

Sherinian wants to eliminate 'bureaufat'

By CHERYL LOTT
Universe Staff Writer

Aaron Sherinian, a senior from South Pasadena, Calif., majoring in political science and Italian, said he plans to make BYUSA the Student Advisory Council a more "user friendly" place if elected BYUSA president.

AARON SHERINIAN

Sherinian's running mate is Kara Higbee, a senior from Plano, Texas, majoring in international marketing. Sherinian was the program director of BYUSA in 1990 and 1993. He did the job, and he did a good job," said Mary Sweat, assistant to the directors for programming for student leadership. Sherinian was also a member of the Deseret Towers Council. He is a volunteer at the Museum of Art and a member of the Italian Club.

"I met BYUSA when I met BYU," Sherinian said.

Sherinian said he has always been a volunteer but never been on what he calls the "high end" of the organizations.

He said he plans to propose term limitations to aid leadership turnover, which he believes will generate new ideas.

Sherinian also said he wants to rid BYUSA of "bureaufat," a term he uses to describe bureaucracy.

Students should feel welcome and at home when they come to the fourth floor, Sherinian said.

BYUSA President Mike Lee is doing a good job and Sherinian will continue his programs, he said.

Sherinian said he plans to establish a telephone hotline where students will be able to call for information about on- and off-campus activities. Students could also voice opinions on the hotline.

Sherinian said his strength lies in his management and people skills. Higbee is also innovative, he said.

Sherinian and Higbee did not start the campaign as running mates, but once they decided to run together, everything worked out well. Their initial platforms were essentially the same. Combining tickets was very easy, they said.

The last book Sherinian read for enjoyment was Getting it Right in Italy, a book about Italian life, people and folklore.

If an extra day were added to the week, he would call his mom.

"And maybe eat some chocolate," Sherinian said.

Sherinian said his most embarrassing moment occurred when the fountain at the Music Center in Los Angeles, Calif., suddenly came on while he and his date to the symphony were standing in the middle of it.

Higbee plans to eliminate gym hand stamp

By CHERYL LOTT
Universe Staff Writer

Kara Higbee, a junior from Plano, Texas, majoring in international marketing, is running for BYUSA vice president.

Her running mate is Aaron Sherinian, a senior from South Pasadena, Calif., majoring in political science and Italian.

Higbee said her involvement in SAC has given her a look at BYUSA and its problems. "BYUSA doesn't sanction what it doesn't understand," Higbee said.

Students that want to do things differently "have a very difficult time," Higbee said.

Higbee plans to bring new blood into BYUSA, thereby bringing new ideas.

Higbee wants to raise money for scholarships by using dance profits.

Higbee plans to eliminate the hand stamp used in the Stephen L. Richards building for intramural athletes. She said the students she has talked with are infuriated by the stamp.

When the campaign began, Higbee and Sherinian were each vying for BYUSA president and decided their campaigns were the same.

KARA HIGBEE

Higbee was president of the College Republicans during the 1992-93 school year and is a SAC officer.

Her SAC responsibilities include evaluating BYUSA and the University. She helped organizational behavior evaluate BYUSA. She has also evaluated BYUSA training procedures.

Officials, however, say reports of the work have not been submitted to SAC coordinators.

"No work has been submitted," said Nicole Boulais, coordinator for student programs.

Higbee said the work was turned in Friday. The reason it wasn't turned in earlier was because she was supervising somebody else and didn't know they had not turned it in.

Boulais said Higbee has not been consistent in meeting attendance recently.

Higbee said she hasn't been at meetings because she is trying to balance two BYUSA jobs and a SAC responsibility.

If she had an extra day added to the week, Higbee would do homework, sleep, do laundry, clean her room and cook a meal for herself.

She said her most embarrassing moment happened when she had just received her driving permit and drove through a cinder block wall and into someone's back yard.

Two candidates drop out of BYUSA race

By JAY VERDOORN and
RACHEL SAUER
Universe Staff Writers

For most of the BYU student body, the BYUSA elections are just beginning; but for some it is already over.

"I told Kara (Higbee, his former running mate) the best thing for us was for me to concede and allow the two camps to unite."

Sam Hoppe, BYUSA candidate that withdrew from the race

Twenty-four hopefuls at the start of the semester aspired to the positions of BYUSA president and Student Advisory Committee vice president.

The field has narrowed to 10, with two serious contenders dropping out last week.

Seth Beal, a sophomore from Woodinville, Wash., majoring in political science, and Sam Hoppe, a sophomore from Cameron Park, Calif., majoring in accounting, were planning to run for SAC vice president.

Friday, they announced their withdrawal from the race in order to combine their running mates onto a single ticket.

"We saw that we have the same platform so we decided to unite to create a stronger ticket," Beal said.

Beal is now campaign manager for Aaron Sherinian and Kara Higbee.

Hoppe said the combination of tickets will bring together the strengths of both camps.

"Our camp had the tactics and theirs had the structure," Hoppe said about the two groups of candidates.

Both Beal and Hoppe said they voluntarily withdrew from the campaign.

"I told Kara (his former running mate) the best thing for us was for me to concede and allow the two camps to unite," Hoppe said.

Both former candidates said they plan to stay involved in SAC and BYUSA affairs and activities.

Lloyd wants to improve BYUSA accessibility

By MARNEE MORTENSEN
Universe Staff Writer

Stacie Lloyd, a junior majoring in public relations and public relations in public relations, is vying for Student Advisory Council vice president.

She said she seeks to improve BYUSA in three areas: participation, accessibility and communication.

Lloyd said she shares these three goals with her running mate Brady Southwick, a junior majoring in political science who is running for BYUSA president.

In a survey Lloyd and Southwick gave to students, students said they feel they are represented; however, 94 percent of those surveyed said they couldn't name their SAC representative.

Through participation, accessibility and communication, Lloyd said she wants to increase interaction and student representation.

She said she wants to send SAC representatives to classrooms, symposiums, club meetings and other places where they can easily interact with students and let them know how to participate.

Lloyd said her campaign is defined by the word "accessible."

STACIE LLOYD

"'Accessible' is a big word for me, and that means taking BYUSA out of the fourth floor," Lloyd said.

BYUSA needs more communication with their students to accomplish goals they consider important, Lloyd said.

Lloyd said the power the administration has given to BYUSA is not fully used because BYUSA is not communicating with students and community members to find out their needs.

Lloyd said she wants to see a weekly column in the Daily Universe updating students on items discussed in previous and forthcoming meetings.

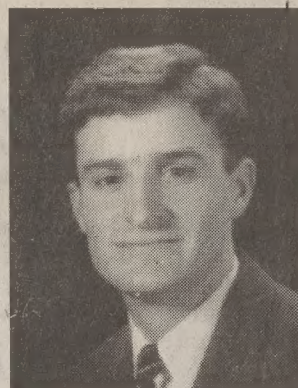

If an extra day was added to the week, Lloyd said she would tackle her "things-to-do list."

One of Lloyd's more embarrassing moments occurred when she was giving her missionary farewell speech. As she was talking, and getting a little emotional, her friends started brushing their cheeks and waving Kleenex's.

Later she found out they weren't waving or giving signs of encouragement, but were trying to give her the hint — she forgot her waterproof mascara.

Southwick has goals to make student likes, dislikes heard

By MARNEE MORTENSEN
Universe Staff Writer

BRADY SOUTHWICK

If you see Brady Southwick lunge toward you as he stumbles down the stairs in the N. Eldon Tanner Building, he's not trying to make a move, he's just trying to get you to vote.

Southwick, a junior from Sandy majoring in political science, is entering the BYU political arena as a candidate running for BYUSA president.

His running mate is Stacie Lloyd, a senior from Sandy majoring in public relations.

Southwick says his campaign is dedicated to making BYUSA represent student opinions, likes and dislikes.

He said he wants to see BYUSA improve in three ways: participation, accessibility and communication.

Participation through voting is the first step to involve students in BYUSA, Southwick said.

"We'd like to broaden it so everyone feels like they have ownership in BYU," he said.

Southwick said poll tallies from last school year show many didn't vote. During the primary election, 3,528 students voted. In the finals 4,853 voted.

"I'd love to see at the next opening meeting with President Rex Lee at least 15,000 students there who feel like they're represented," Southwick said.

Brady said the first time he found out about the SAC was when they came to his economics class.

Accessibility by taking BYUSA out of the fourth floor is necessary to improve BYUSA's ability to discern student's wants and needs, Southwick said.

Southwick said he wants to establish concrete open forums so students can share their views with University and student leaders. Open forums exist now, but need more advertising and publicity, he said.

"I want SAC to get out and meet their constituency," Southwick said.

"I want to facilitate more opportunities for the administration to talk with the students in forums."

He said he wants to make SAC a liaison between administration representatives and students who want to participate directly in legislation.

Communication with the student body is another essential step to ensure BYUSA acts on student's behalf.

Southwick said he wants to help accomplish this through making representatives solely responsible for asking for student opinion through surveys and focus groups.

Southwick said he is already trying

Cowley says he wants to shake BYUSA's bad image

By HEATHER MCDONALD
Universe Staff Writer

Students don't realize what BYUSA is about — and that is service, said Matt Cowley, a junior from Mission Hills, Mich., majoring in English and minoring in economics who is running for BYUSA president.

His running mate is Kamie Hobbs, a junior from Idaho Falls, Idaho, majoring in communications.

Cowley says that as president, he would have the leadership abilities and qualities to shake BYUSA's bad image.

"The solution is to give everyone a stake in BYUSA," Cowley said.

He said he wants to speak to people who haven't been spoken to and to specifically address the concerns of international students and married students who have felt isolated in the past.

They need more opportunities to serve within the organization, he said.

"The issue is a feeling of ownership that can only be accomplished by addressing their needs," Cowley said.

As executive director in community service for BYUSA since October, 1993, Cowley has filled the leadership qualification required by the new election procedures.

Working in this capacity, he said that he has gained credibility and capability among administrators and faculty as well as among those in the committees he directs.

"I have been able to keep a balance giving people enough freedom to work, while keeping them moving toward the goal," Cowley said.

Brady Blake, a junior from Ogden majoring in public relations and associate vice president for community service, works closely with Cowley.

He is energetic, bright and a sharp guy, Brady said.

He was able to pick up midsemester where someone else left off, when volunteers were busy organizing for Sub-for-Santa.

"This year was one of the program's best," Brady said.

Laura Talbot, BYUSA vice president for community service said Cowley has fulfilled his duties as executive director.

"I am confident that he would serve the students well," said Talbot, a junior from Provo majoring in recreation therapy.

Cowley said his mission in Czechoslovakia, where the small numbers of members relied heavily on the missionaries, taught him about service and leadership.

Hobbs says she'll focus on student involvement

By KRISTINA LOWE

Greater student representation in the Student Advisory Council is the main goal of Kamie Hobbs, 20, a junior from Idaho Falls, Idaho, majoring in communications who is running for SAC vice president.

Hobbs is the running mate for Matt Cowley, a junior from Michigan Hills, Mich., majoring in English.

She said she has three years of experience at BYUSA.

If elected, Hobbs said she and Cowley want to help students feel as if they have a personal stake in BYUSA. Hobbs said she and her running mate also want to get more students involved in the organization.

"We're focusing on groups that have not been focused on in the past, like multicultural students and married students," Hobbs said. "With my leadership abilities, I will go out and motivate students and will go out and find the issues they are concerned about."

As a freshman, Hobbs was program director for the Sub-for-Santa Program. She said she had such a positive experience that she has continued to work for BYUSA.

In her three years at BYU, Hobbs was also program director for the Spring Formal, was the intercollegiate director for the Community Service Center and is BYUSA's associate vice president for Campus Life.

Hobbs is also a member of the President's Advisory Council. "She started working with me as an officer with relatively little experience," said Sallie Larsen, coordinator for student leadership development. "I was skeptical at first because she was jumping into a high position with just a little background, but she took right off."

"She's exceptional, very positive, energetic and dependable," said Dan Rigby, 24, a junior majoring in psychology from Spokane, Wash., and vice president of Campus Life.

"I have such a love for BYUSA because I've had such good experiences. I've seen it under three different presidents so I've seen different ways to do things. I've learned as much up here as in the classroom," said Hobbs.

Hobbs said her main goal is to serve students. She said she wants other students to have as positive an experience with BYUSA as she has had.

If given an eighth day in the week, Hobbs said she would make it a day to focus on people. She said she would do things like serve people by writing letters and making visits.

The Client, by John Grisham is the last book Hobbs read for fun. Hobbs said she has read all of Grisham's books.

Encore performances of 'Prisoner' capture Y audiences this week

By KRISTINA LOWE
Universe Lifestyle Writer

BYU audiences have one more chance to see "Prisoner," a BYU student's play about American prisoners of war in Vietnam, before it leaves to compete at the regional American College Theatre Festival in Hayward, Calif., on Feb. 19.

"Prisoner" is a true story about an American POW during the Vietnam War. The play was written by Jim Bell, 25, a senior majoring in theatre arts from Los Angeles.

Bell's play is one of eight plays competing at the festival chosen from 187 different college and university productions. The ACTF region includes Nevada, Arizona, Utah, Hawaii and Guam.

"Prisoner" re-enacts the experiences Navy Lt. Gerald Coffee has while being held in Vietnamese prison camps. The first act of the play begins with Coffee's capture and the isolation and initial torture. The second act of the play deals with Coffee's experiences and relationships with the other prisoners.

Bell said although the play is set in Vietnam, it is not about the war. "It is about how prisoners survived and came to deal with their circumstances and even grew from their experiences," he said.

"To miss out would be to miss out on one of the better performances at BYU," Bell said. "Take the chance and come see it."

"Prisoner" is the only production in the festival that was written by a student. At the festival, the production will also compete for an invitation to the national ACTF at the Kennedy Center in Washington, D.C.

"We see this as a real honor to our department, the University and to our playwriting program," said Eric Fielding, chair of the Theatre and Film Department. "To be selected as one of eight productions in our region and to be the only one written by a student speaks highly of the production and the directorship of Ivan Crosland."

Last semester, "Prisoner" sold out during the last week of its run, so audiences should get tickets early, Bell said. Proceeds from the tickets will help finance the trip to the regionals.

"Prisoner" will run Wednesday and Thursday at 7:30 p.m. and Friday and Saturday at 9:30 p.m. at the Gates Theater, HFAC. Tickets are $3 for students, faculty and staff and $4 for the public. Tickets can be purchased at the ticket office in the Harris Fine Arts Center or by calling 378-HFAC.

Student's play selected for regional competition

By KRISTINA LOWE
Universe Lifestyle Writer

A BYU student's first attempt at playwriting has landed a spot competing in a regional competition for the American College Theatre Festival in Hayward, Calif., on Feb. 19.

The play "Prisoner" was written by Jim Bell, 25, a senior theatre arts major from Los Angeles. Bell wrote the play for a BYU playwriting class that he took as an elective because he knew very little about the playwriting aspect of theater.

After the playwriting class, Bell said his teacher urged him to submit "Prisoner" to BYU's Playwrights/Directors/Actors Workshop. PDA meets one semester every year and is made up of faculty who choose three or four plays to be workshopped by theater students during the year.

"Prisoner" was chosen by PDA. Bell said the play grew a lot through the workshop experience. He said the result of PDA and lots of hard work is why the play is worthy to go to regionals.

Bell said having his play go to regionals is amazing.

"When I first started the play, I had no aspirations for it. Now that I've seen it staged, I'm convinced that it has more potential than I would have thought."

At the festival, the play will compete with eight other plays in the ACTF region. If "Prisoner" does well, Bell said it will almost ensure that it is produced professionally.

"Prisoner" is about the experiences of Lt. Gerald Coffee, a prisoner of war for seven years during the Vietnam War. Although the play is set in Vietnam, Bell said it is not a statement about whether the war was right or wrong.

Bell said he tries to portray the experiences of people in the war rather than focusing on the act of war itself.

"I think one of the strengths of 'Prisoner' is how it also details the Vietnamese guards' situation. I tried to show some positive experiences between the prisoners and the guards. The guards were prisoners of the whole war situation themselves," Bell said.

Bell said because his play elicits a different response from each viewer it is not for everyone.

"It's an emotional experience, an enlightening experience and a rewarding experience. It could walk away with everything or nothing," Bell said.

"The way it's staged, you're, at most, 20 feet from the action. It forces you to confront the play.

At times it's very violent and very realistic and there are some light moments," he said.

The idea for "Prisoner" came to Bell while he was driving across the country with his parents after serving a mission in Ireland. His mother had a Reader's Digest that had a condensed version of a book on Coffee and he was inspired by the story.

Bell commended the cast of "Prisoner" and director Ivan Crosland for all the energy and work they have put into the play.

"Ivan put my play on stage and made sure it stayed my play. He gave me the final say in a lot of things, and the play is a lot stronger now than at the beginning of production."

"Prisoner" is not only Bell's initiation to playwriting but it's several cast members' initiation to acting.

Bell said he and Crosland solicited members of BYU's Asian Club to play the Vietnamese guards, so several of the guards had no previous theater experience. The original cast, minus two children, will perform the play in the festival.

"I've never seen a cast work so well together. They've put all egos aside," Bell said. "I've never seen a cast make such a commitment to a show or show so much enthusiasm."

JIM BELL

Bell said

seeing "Prisoner" go from paper to stage has helped him realize the truth of production theory.

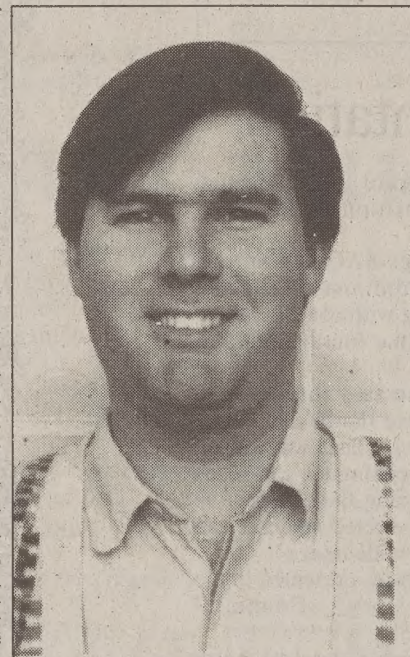

"Production theory is that plays are not just meant to be read as literature. Plays are an art form that need to be performed," Bell said. "'Prisoner' has made me see the genesis of a play from my hands to the hands of the director and actors."

Several Vietnam veterans, their families and Lt. Coffee have been very supportive of "Prisoner," Bell said. Coffee, who lives in Hawaii, came to BYU last December to see a staging of the play and plans to be in San Francisco for the festival.

Bell said he urges people to come see "Prisoner" before it heads to California.

"You'll leave the theater with a great appreciation of what the human soul can accomplish. You'll leave with a great appreciation for, right or wrong, men who gave up a lot for their country," Bell said.

After graduation in April, Bell said he plans to pursue an advanced degree in theater and then would like to teach theater in college. He said he plans to continue writing on the side.

SHAKESPEAREAN COMEDY: Sir John Falstaff (Jason Tatom, center) is getting bested by some of his favorite wives (Stephanie Foster Breinholt and Allison Belnap) in BYU's version of Shakespeare's comedy "The Merry Wives of Windsor." Performances begin Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in the Pardoe Theatre.

The Merry Wives of Windsor comes to stage this week at Y

Universe Services

When the Queen of England asked Shakespeare to write a play starring her favorite knave, Sir John Falstaff, he had penned a comedy in 14 days. Titled "The Merry Wives of Windsor," it chronicles the antics of Shakespeare's most famous rotdun. The play — particularly the character Falstaff — was considered to be full of merriment then and continues to be valued the same way today.

BYU audiences can share in the merriment during February when the Fine Arts and Film Department stages "The Merry Wives of Windsor" at the Pardoe Theatre.

Performances will begin Thursday and continue through Feb. 26, with matinees on Saturdays at 7:30 a.m. and 2:21 at 4 p.m.

Tickets are $8 for general public, $7 for seniors and alumni and $6 for students.

dents, faculty and staff. Tickets are available through the Fine Arts Ticket Office, 378-4322.

As the play opens, Falstaff returns from the crusades and tries to settle down in the sleepy, staid town of Windsor.

To occupy his time and secure some much-needed cash, he contrives the lucrative seduction of two English housewives. He makes the mistake, however, of selecting women who are more clever than he.

"Merry Wives" is a unique Shakespearean comedy in the sense that there is never a threat of death, nothing much is really at stake, and no one, Falstaff included, is punished severely at the end," says Darise Error, publicist with the Theatre Department.

"There is throughout a remarkable air of geniality and good humor. Set in the familiar, undisguised locale of Windsor, 'Merry Wives' successfully presents ordinary middle-class life of the period.

"Although far from a realistic piece, this play transcends the realms of mere farce.

And Falstaff remains the delightfully eloquent rogue that so delighted Queen Elizabeth."

Faculty director Barta Heiner selected Jason K. Tatom as Sir John Falstaff. Mistresses Ford, Page and Quickly will be played by Stephanie Foster Breinholt, Allison Phillips Belnap and Megan R. Scoville.

Also performing will be Christopher Higbee, Darin Andersen, A. Cameron Sevy, Eric Brotherson, Adam Boulter, Christopher Clark, Allison Stander, Doug Flandro, Derek Curtis, Matthew Rockwood, Sara Stauffer, J. Michael Stull, D. Aaron Dalton, Curtis Brein and John Michael Grant.

Eric Fielding is scenic designer and Curt Barton designed the lights. Costumes have been designed by Rory Scanlon and Sally Carroll. Erin McGuire is serving as stage manager.

Student-filmmakers contest provides cash opportunities

By TIFFANY CRAMER ELIASON
Universe Lifestyle Writer

Student-filmmakers have the opportunity of winning money and recognition by entering the Alamo American Film Competition for Students.

According to a press release from Tilson and Associates, the competition will award more than $20,000 to winning student-filmmakers in the five film categories of narrative, documentary, experimental, music video and public service announcement.

Cash awards from Alamo Rent A Car will be presented in June, including $1,000 to each first-place winner, $500 for second place and $250 for third-place winners.

There will also be thousands of dollars in other awards from the competition's co-sponsors, including grants from The Kodak Worldwide Student Program and portable cellular phones from Cellular One.

"What we're unveiling is a new national platform that will provide the recognition and encouragement that America's most promising student-filmmakers need to excel in their art form," said Charles D. Platt, president and chief operating officer of Alamo Rent A Car.

"The student-filmmakers of today are the future leaders of America's great motion picture industry.

"We are proud to recognize their pursuit of excellence in an art form so deeply ingrained in America's culture as the motion picture," Platt said.

Linda D'Olympio, Alamo manager of community affairs, said the winning entries will be distributed to major film industry executives so that outstanding student-filmmakers may be recognized.

Competitors must be currently enrolled at a university or college in the United States. Entries must be submitted on NTSC VHS half-inch video cassette. To obtain an official entry form call (407) 392-4988. The entry deadline is April 30.

Dixie players get gig at Mama's Cafe

By JENNIFER CARR
Universe Lifestyle Writer

Two BYU associates and a retired UVSC Institute teacher entertained an audience at Mama's Cafe playing with the Silver Strings Banjo Bunch Dixie Folk Revival on Friday night.

Reed Payne, who works in the Clinical Psychology Department, plays piano and began the band with his neighbor Jerry Maxfield about 15 years ago.

"We just like music and happened to get together," Payne said. "This isn't the original band. We have a terrible mortality rate — some die and some move away."

"The music we play is Dixie, like on the old riverboats," Payne said.

"The name just happened. We've used Banjo Bunch a lot of times."

Dr. Jim Clarke, a physician at the McDonald Health Center, joined the band about six years ago. He plays the banjo and only at Mama's does he tell some of the jokes.

"Jerry Maxfield usually tells all the jokes, but we've played Mama's twice before and he ran out of jokes," Clarke said.

"The first time we played at Mama's, we wondered if the students would listen to us, or if they'd walk out," Clarke said. "The students have been very gracious, and seem to enjoy the music."

teacher from UVSC, plays the spoons and occasionally the bones.

"The spoons I use are U.S. Army issue spoons from World War II. They are very hard to find," Roundy said of her instruments.

Roundy learned to play the spoons as a result of her three missions. She used her talent as a proselyting tool.

"I played the spoons and my companion crocheted when we visited people," Roundy said.

The other members of the band are from the Provo/Orem area. They are Jerry Maxfield, Al Giddings, Alton Barzee, Jack Linde and Don Hansen.

"They're great, I wonder how many gigs they get," said Jeff Hansen a junior majoring in Spanish translation from Manassas, Va.

Gymnastics tumbles over Southern Utah University

By AMEE WALKER
Universe Sports Writer

In only its second meet of the season, the BYU women's gymnastics team improved its team score by five points over the first meet and decisively beat Southern Utah University with a score of 190.4250 to 180.8500 in the Smith Fieldhouse Friday.

"We were really happy with how we did," said Cassie Pauga, a sophomore from Lethbridge,

Alberta, Canada. "It was an improvement over two weeks ago and we hope to keep improving and get better and better."

BYU had the top three finishers in the all-around competition and the top three finishers in all individual events except the floor exercise. The Cougars had the top two scores in the floor exercise.

Pauga was the top all-around finisher with a score of 38.550. She also led individual scoring on the floor exercise and uneven bars with scores of 9.725 and 9.675 respectively.

"I was happy with how I did especially hitting my bar and beam routines," Pauga said. "It was good for my own confidence to stick four routines."

Junior Nanette T. Walker finished second in the all-around competition with 37.250 and had the high vault score with a 9.750.

Sophomore Elisabeth Crandall led all balance beam scores with a 9.725.

BYU Coach Brad Cattermole said that Friday's performance was an overall improvement over the last meet. He said he was especially pleased with team performance on the vault.

"Team confidence is coming back up," Cattermole said. "We're working in the right direction."

Cattermole said he is especially excited about the team's future.

"I think we'll be one of the top teams in the country," Cattermole said.

The top all-around scorer for the Thunderbirds was senior Jill Eagles with a 36.700. The only top-three finisher in the individual events for Southern Utah was Julie Talbot, a freshman from Provo, with a third place score of 9.475 on the floor exercise.

BYU will meet the Thunderbirds again tonight in Cedar City.

If it comes off, it will undoubtedly be one of the most dramatic confrontations in Olympic history. And perhaps one of the highest rated TV shows ever.

If it doesn't, the glamour event of the Winter Games will lose much of its sizzle.

Right now, it's still on, even though a U.S. Figure Skating Association panel called for a disciplinary hearing against Harding. The panel said Saturday that it found "reasonable grounds" to believe she was involved in the attack on Kerrigan at the national championships in Detroit a month ago.

Rather than boot Harding from the Olympic team, the association passed the decision on to the USOC along with a "black book" containing nearly 400 pages of affidavits, court documents and other evidence gathered independently by the panel.

Virtually all of that information is in the hands of prosecutors in Portland, Ore., who have not charged Harding in a plot that has already brought a guilty plea by her ex-husband Jeff Gillooly and confessions by three other men.

Claire Ferguson, president of the USFSA, carefully followed the rules of the association in not suspending Harding prior to the disciplinary hearing.

"I would prefer to have Tonya have her time with the hearing panel, to follow through and to make sure she's had her chance to speak with the member panel," Ferguson said Sunday on CBS' "Face the Nation."

Asked whether there were any conditions under which she might suspend Harding before the Olympics, Ferguson replied:

"No, because I believe that the Olympics has a different set of rules that can handle this if they so choose. We are concerned with our world championships as well as the Olympics, which will be held in Japan in the middle of March, and we must have our team there. Our placements for the next year are based on this world championships. It's very important."

Bill Hybl, chairman of the five-member USFSA panel and a former USOC president, acknowledged that the fear of a lawsuit by Harding was a factor in the association's judgment to proceed conservatively.

"I think there's no question," Hybl said. "It's been widely discussed. But this is one issue the panel discussed and the five of us decided that we were going to go forward based on the evidence, based on the rules of the articles in the bylaws of the Figure Skating Association and not really let the fact that there could be litigation be involved in our decision."

The USOC is expected to convene its Games Administrative Board within two weeks in Norway to determine Harding's status, and a decision to

Men's tennis team optimistic despite losses

By MIKE SYLVESTER
Universe Sports Writer

Even after losses this week to 12th-ranked Pepperdine and 23rd-ranked University of San Diego, BYU men's tennis Coach Jim Osborne says optimistic about the remainder of the Cougar's season.

"Those six losses may be the best thing that could happen to us to get for the bulk of our WAC season," Osborne said.

"The idea of playing those top teams is to find out what you need to on," Osborne said. "The guys realized that we can stay even with these teams just have to work on consistency in singles play."

The Cougars went 0-6 on the opening road trip of the season, a road trip pitted them against four nationally ranked teams: No. 12 Pepperdine, Kentucky, no. 19 New Mexico and no. 23 USD.

"It's an eye-opener to all of the guys to have to play against the top teams in the country," Osborne said.

The Cougars were swept by Pepperdine 7-0, but played a close match against USD, losing 4-3.

Playing in the No. 1 spot for BYU, freshman Boris Bosnjakovic came back to win the second and third sets and the match against USD's Fredrik Axast 7, 7-5, 6-3. Bosnjakovic was replacing BYU's Herman Vandecasteele at while Vandecasteele was playing at the Rolex Nationals in Dallas.

In the No. 2 spot, senior Micah Rideout of BYU defeated USD's R Pauliska 6-1, 6-4.

"At one, two and three we can play with anybody in the country and them a battle," Osborne said.

Lance Squire, a junior from Orem, brought in BYU's third victory against USD, defeating J.J. Shobar 6-1, 6-2.

The team's next match is at Utah on Feb. 25.

The Cougars will finally return home March 2 for a four-game home beginning with Weber State.

UNIVERSALS.—At the Rolex Championships in Dallas, Vandecasteele No. 1 Laurent Orsini of Mississippi State in three sets of the first round, 6, 6, 6-3. Vandecasteele was then defeated in the first consolation round by Figgley of Texas Christian.

Olympics to open in Norway despite death, intrigue

Associated Press

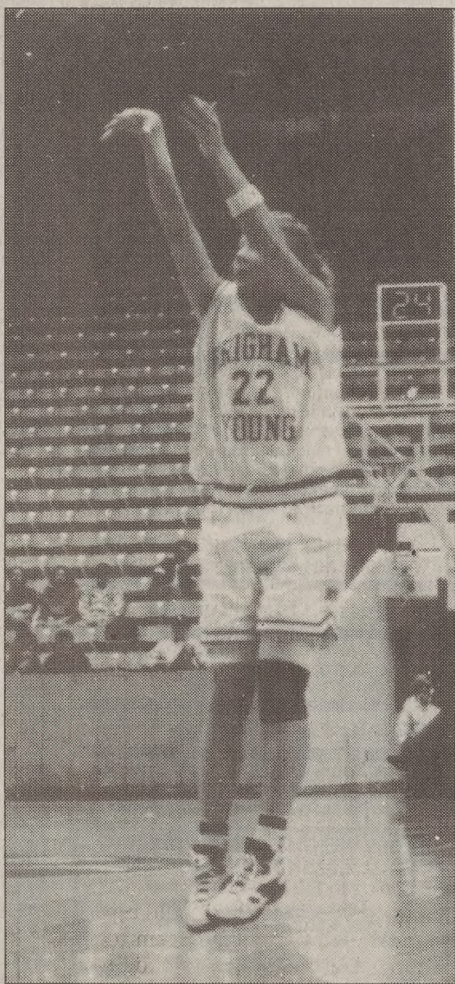

LILLEHAMMER, Norway — First, the neo-Nazi. Then came the whack on the knee. And, almost on the eve of the Games, an Austrian skier's death on the mountain. These events and other turbulence buffeting the road to the Winter Olympics, a cloud darkens the southern horizon: the increasing savagery in Sarajevo, where Serbians frolicked just a decade ago. The Winter Olympics that might have been remembered for the beauty of Boitano, Witt and Torvill and Dean, for the efficiency of the hosts' efficiency, instead may be indelibly marked by controversy and tragedy. It has never before has there been such a buildup to a Winter Games — or so much turmoil. It proves that painstaking preparations only go so far in Olympic success. In France two years ago, where the organizers were aided by environmentalists and many visitors criticized the games as too far-flung, the Norwegians have won unanimous praise and managed to smooth out any controversies in making facilities were ready way ahead of time. The International Olympic Committee president, Juan Antonio Samaranch, says the ecological planning was so savvy that it should be called the "Green Games." Even the weather has cooperated — the snow is deep and powdery and has satisfied any biathlete. A real life has intruded — events that have little or nothing to do with times, scores or medals. "It's been a strange time," says Canadian figure skater

Brian Orser, in a comment about the Nancy Kerrigan attack that might also be applied to the Olympics as a whole. "Hopefully now, the skating will shine through." Until Oct. 29, there was no hint of Olympic trouble ahead. Those who paid attention to winter sports knew this would be the Year of the Professional, with skating competition enlivened by the returns of past gold medalists Brian Boitano, Katarina Witt and the perfect pair from ice dancing in Sarajevo, Jayne Torvill and Christopher Dean. Then, at a bar near the winter sports capital of Oberhof, Germany, a gang of young neo-Nazis began harassing black American luger Robert Pipkins and went on to beat up his white teammate, Duncan Kennedy. The ugly incident embarrassed Germany, outraged Americans and has stirred debate about world racism as the lugers prepare to compete in Lillehammer. The shocking Jan. 6 assault on Kerrigan with a metal baton as she came off the ice from practice generated even a lesser injury than the one to Kennedy, but mountains more headlines. Sideline the favorite before the U.S. women's national championships in Detroit, it was a whodunit no fiction writer would have dared write, a tawdry tale that leads the nightly TV news as well as "Hard Copy" and "A Current Affair." Did rival Tonya Harding order the attack or didn't she? Ex-husband Jeff Gillooly, who has already pleaded guilty in the assault, says yes, and her bodyguard and two other men have confessed to their roles. Daily speculation about whether she will be allowed to skate in Norway have reduced the Boitanos and Witts to minor sidebars.

Cougars extend winning streak to 4 in a row

By AMEE WALKER
Universe Sports Writer

The BYU women's basketball team extended its winning streak to four with its most decisive WAC win of the season over New Mexico Saturday night, 73-45. BYU Coach Jeanie Wilson said she can sense the team's confidence. "The team is going to take off," Wilson said. "I can see a look on (the players') faces that says 'We're back. This is us.'" Wilson said the key to Saturday night's victory was the Cougars' defense and ability to look for the best shot. A member of BYU's team scored in Saturday's matchup for a team total percentage of 39 percent. The Cougars were led by junior center Debbie Dimond with 18 points and eight rebounds. Junior guard Thais Kidd was second in scoring with nine points, three rebounds, four assists and four steals. "It's exciting to have everything working as a team," Kidd said. Junior forward Behka Stafford contributed eight points and five rebounds and had a three-point shot that added an interesting twist to the game. The ball did not make it through the net, but it did get caught between the rim and backboard. The shot clock froze at 22 seconds which happened to be the same as Stafford's number and Wyoming's score. The victory improved the Cougars to 10-10 overall and 5-3 in the WAC. The Lobos were led by Jessica Cunningham who had 14 points and five rebounds. New Mexico shot only 26 percent for the game. The Cougars dropped the Lobos to 1-18 overall and 0-7 in the WAC.

Recruiting athletes a lengthy job

By DAVID SCHREINDL
Universe Sports Writer

Today's world of college football is a high-income producing game, and recruiting becomes vital to the success of a winning program. January 2 was the first day high school seniors could officially sign letters of intent. This ended months of work and frustration for college coaches. Finding the good athlete is easy, finding the kids that can adapt physically and socially is the hard part. Chris Pella, BYU's recruiting coordinator, said that the athlete who meets the criteria minimum 2.0 (next year the minimum will be 2.5) high school G.P.A. and a 17 on the ACT is eligible to be recruited. BYU administration retains the right to refuse any recruit if they feel does not match up to admission requirements. In addition to LaVell Edwards, who has a group of 9 assistant coaches who go out and offer scholarships to players on behalf of BYU. Pella, also, including alumni and current players, is allowed to talk to recruits as a BYU representative. Pella said the coaches who recruit for BYU are assigned to recruit only in Utah. The other four divide up the West including Texas and Arizona. BYU recruits in the western part of the country on a referral basis. Either the LDS Church or high school coaches send BYU information about the football players interested in coming to BYU. Pella said 200 referrals a year come in from the first place we look at in recruiting is Utah and Southern California, said Pella. Recruiting is limited by the NCAA. Division I schools may only have 85 scholarship players and can only have 105 players on the roster before school starts. After the first day of classes, schools can have an unlimited amount of players on the roster. With BYU only suits up about 70 players for home games and can only have 105 players to away games. Schools need the extra players for their prep teams. Pella said BYU stages walk-ons as BYU averages about 100 walk-ons a season. The better the prep teams the better the team will be in games. One of the problems found in recruiting is balance. BYU divides up scholarships among the various regions, yet missions cause scholarships to go instead of helping. Since the recruiting year goes from June to June players who leave or return during the year take up scholarship slots even though they don't see any playing time. "People need to realize not every kid is dying to come to BYU," Pella said. "Our program speaks for itself, but the kids (who come here) have to give up the earrings, partying and all the other stuff. The hard part is sorting them out." Recruiting is a team process. NCAA rules limit coaches to four evaluations and three contacts for each individual player. An evaluation includes watching the player in a game or practice or talking to the coach or the player's school officials. A contact constitutes talking with the player or his parents. NCAA rules state that a player can not be contacted before May of his junior year. The team effort comes after the regional coach evaluates a player for the first time. The player is then referred to a position coach who helps the regional coach with further recruiting. "I was recruited by Norm Chow and had a visit by LaVell Edwards to my home," said Tyler Anderson. "Ty Detmer took me around campus. It turned out to be my first and last official visit."

One of the three contacts a school is allowed, comes in the form of an official visit. Schools pay the expenses of bringing a recruit to its campus. While on a visit the school pays for the recruit's meals and room. "It's so easy when you are being recruited to think you are better than you really are," said Shay Muirbrook, a BYU freshman linebacker. "You can get swept up in everything. You kind of overlook opportunities because of all the different schools calling you up." "BYU seemed to be honest and kept almost all their promises," said defensive back Cory Cook. "Where as talking with other friends, that's rare. They (BYU) also really care. They plan your future in case of injury and don't throw you away (after injuries) like at other schools." Recruits also spend time with players. For entertainment the rule is $10 for recruit and $10 for the host. "I just felt good about the experience of BYU," said Kalin Hall. "Football was the secondary reason for coming here. The people and atmosphere made it the right choice for me."

Rockets, Pistons nix earlier trade

Associated Press

HOUSTON — The Houston Rockets on Sunday called off their trade for Detroit Pistons forward Sean Elliott after he failed to pass a physical. Rockets coach Rudy Tomjanovich refused to say what part of the physical Elliott had failed. Elliott was traded Friday for forwards Robert Horry and Matt Bullard. He took a physical Saturday in Houston, then Rockets team physician Bruce Moseley requested additional tests. According to NBA rules, all parties involved in a trade must pass physicals before the trade is completed. "It ain't going to happen, so let's go on from here," Tomjanovich said. Horry and Bullard were with the Pistons on Saturday night when they lost at home to the Nets 107-100, but neither player was allowed in uniform. Tomjanovich said Horry and Bullard were to return to Houston Sunday but would miss Sunday night's home game against the Minnesota Timberwolves. They will rejoin the team at practice Monday.

"I don't feel anything negative about these guys," Tomjanovich said of the two. Elliott, who had knee surgery in high school, plays with braces on both knees. Last season, playing for the San Antonio Spurs, he missed 12 games because of back problems. He missed his last four games with the Pistons because of pneumonia. "Anybody would be concerned if you can't go through a routine physical in a direct, straightforward way," Moseley said Saturday. Pistons coach Don Chaney expressed surprise after learning Elliott had failed the medical exam. "I'd like to know for myself what the situation is before I make any statements," Chaney said.

Women's tennis prepares for match with Minnesota tonight

By PETE NETTESHEIM

Following a 7-2 victory over 24th-ranked Tennessee last weekend, BYU's 17th-ranked women's tennis team will host the University of Minnesota Monday at noon on the indoor courts. "Minnesota has always had a competitive team in the Big Ten," Coach Ann Valentine said. "It's a strong conference."

INDOOR COURTS

After a week of tough practices, the Cougar's three seniors, Monika Kobilikova, Evi Koljanin and Sarah Mugnaini feel confident about Monday's match. "We've worked hard on the things that have been missing in our games," Kobilikova said.

After a strong performance against nationally ranked Tennessee, BYU feels that a positive attitude, more consistency and the home court advantage will be keys to success against Minnesota. "We've been working on consistency," Koljanin said. "We just need to keep a good attitude." Mugnaini is coming off an injury that has kept her sidelined since May, but feels that with increased playing time she will feel more relaxed. "I just need to play more matches," Mugnaini said. "The more matches I play, the faster I'll get back into my rhythm." The Cougars feel that playing at home is an advantage for any team. "We're more motivated at home," Kobilikova said. "The crowd pumps us up." "Even though I'm more nervous at home, I think it's a definite advantage," Koljanin said. Admission is free and those attending may enter a drawing for free tennis lessons and merchandise.

Clinton plots plan of action after Bosnia mortar attack

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton conferred with his top national security advisers Sunday to chart a course for dealing with escalating violence in Bosnia amid intensifying calls from Congress for air strikes.

An administration official said eastern military action was clearly "on the table" after a mortar attack Sunday in the Bosnian capital of Sarajevo that left 68 dead and hundreds wounded.

Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole asserted that a decision by Clinton to order air strikes would have "strong bipartisan support" in Congress.

Clinton — along with other leaders — appeared still to be groping for an effective strategy to end the bloodshed in the former Yugoslavia.

Monday after he sent a U.S. medical team and three transport planes to Sarajevo to help evacuate the wounded, Clinton summoned top national security officials to the White House to discuss the deteriorating situation.

Clinton was leaving later in the day for Houston on a 21/2-day trip that will combine political fund raising with promoting his health-care program. Aides said the president did not consider the situation to be a crisis to warrant delay of the trip.

An administration official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Clinton asked for an update on the situation and was also eager for details on what the medical team had learned in Sarajevo.

Clinton — who late Saturday issued a statement condemning the "cowardly act" and calling for engaging allies on next steps — was not likely to take any steps without consulting with NATO partners, the official said.

In Munich, Germany, Defense Secretary William Perry said that the United States would not invoke air strikes unilaterally, noting the difficulty imposed by the presence of 28,000 lightly armed U.N. peacekeepers in Bosnia.

Perry denounced the attack on civilians in Sarajevo as an "unforgivable incident" but suggested air strikes would have limited value in ending the civil strife. He called instead for a negotiated settlement.

"It is time for responsible leaders among the warring factions to step forward and be counted. It is time for the international community to stand together and bring the maximum pressure to bear," Perry told a military conference in Munich.

Perry's remarks seemed to back away from comments the day before when he suggested "stronger action, including air strikes" might be warranted to prevent the "strangulation" of Sarajevo.

NASA considers canceling discovery shuttle experiment

Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — For the second day in a row, NASA failed to release a science satellite from the shuttle Discovery on Sunday, considering canceling the troubled experiment.

It was not clear whether NASA would try again Monday to deploy the Wake Shield Facility or give up on the experiment, which was one of the primary purposes of the shuttle mission.

Even if the satellite could be deployed Monday, there was no way all the science objectives could be met, officials said.

The Wake Shield was supposed to fly free of the shuttle for two days so scientists could try to grow semiconductor films in the ultra-clean wake created by the saucer-shaped craft. There wouldn't be enough time for two days of free flight even if the latest problem — a guidance sensor snafu — could be resolved in time for a Monday release.

Former BYUSA presidents credit organization for success

By RACHEL SAUER
Universe Staff Writer

Life of a BYUSA president is not always a good day, hectic and stressful every other day. After a year of daily dealing with the stress and balancing the rewards, most finish college, graduate and go out into the "real world."

Being at the forefront of university attention for a year as BYUSA president and influencing student life, many students wonder what happened to former BYUSA presidents.

Clawson, BYUSA president for the 1982-83 school year, said he gained insight into life after BYUSA.

Clawson lives in Provo with his wife and their 1-year-old son. After earning his MBA from BYU, he began working for a multi-media authoring company as a product developer.

Clawson said, "Being able to bring students together to develop a savvy for organizational behavior," Clawson said.

"It gave me the ability to organize and move projects through and gave me exposure to the dynamics of the work place."

"What many don't realize is that BYU gives an accurate representation of the real world in the way that politics, business, academics and other factors interact."

The good friends and mentors made at college and the groups worked with are key to having a good college experience, Clawson said.

Jason Hall, BYUSA president for the 1992-93 school year, currently works as a financial planner for Mutual of New York at the Salt Lake City agency.

"Jason is a really productive thinker and I noticed that being BYUSA president helped him to be able to implement his ideas with the help of people around him," said Kolette Hall, Jason's wife and a BYU senior majoring in elementary education.

"Being able to bring students together to serve other students in a university setting was a great opportunity for both of us."

Peace comes through understanding

By TIFFANY OLSON
Universe Staff Writer

The only sure way to bring peace to this world is through understanding, said Elder Henry B. Eyring, member of the First Quorum of the Seventy of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, at a fireside at the Marriott Center Sunday night.

Elder Eyring spoke on how seldom we see peace in the media and how a lack of peace is growing across the world and in our cities.

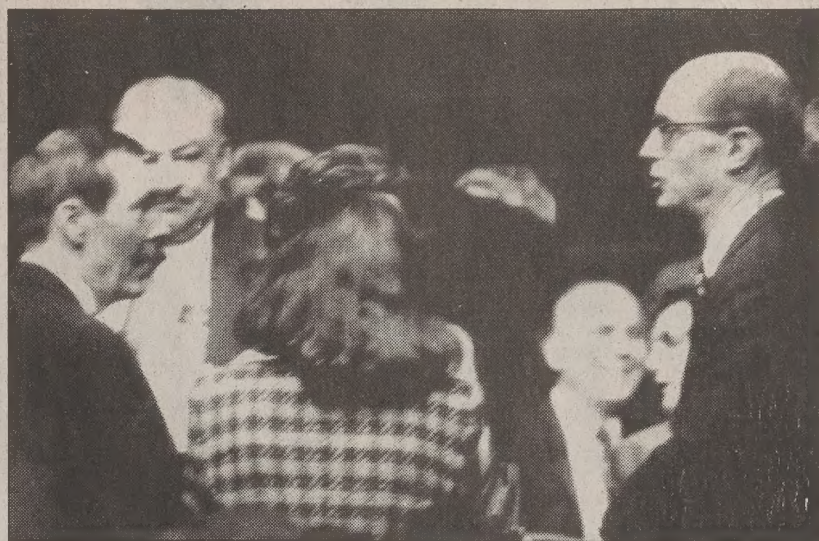

Elder Eyring said the only sure way to peace is through understanding.

"You can never build a fence long enough, or high enough, or strong enough, they will always find a way around it," Elder Eyring said. "That is why disarmament, negotiation and education are not likely to create a world or neighborhood of lasting peace."

Elder Eyring said members of the Church need to renounce war and proclaim peace. Peace can be obtained by continually having a repentant attitude, he said.

The effect of remission of sins and receiving forgiveness brings peace, meekness and a lowliness of heart, Elder Eyring said. That change comes from the Holy Ghost.

to their lives is through example.

"What a blessing we can be if we reach out to help others by exercising faith in Jesus Christ, repenting, accepting Christ's teachings, and gaining the Holy Ghost as a constant companion," Elder Eyring said.

He said the best way for Church members to begin to be an example is through choosing wisely the music they listen to, the books they read, and the pictures hanging on their walls. If chosen wisely, those decisions will help them feel the Holy Ghost more in their lives, he said.

Elder Eyring said people should ask themselves, "What would the Savior have me do, that I have been putting off, because it seems so hard?" He said by doing so people will begin to change and will feel real faith in Jesus Christ and feel sorrow for their sins.

Utah gets help from Colorado leaders in efforts to reject nuclear facility

Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — Utah has had some unexpected help in efforts to persuade neighboring Colorado to reject a proposed nuclear-waste facility along a river just east of the Utah border.

The speaker of the Colorado House of Representatives sent a letter to Colorado Gov. Roy Romer imploring him to include Utah in proceedings regarding "border issues impacting our mutual environmental concerns."

Then on Thursday, Western Colorado Congress, a citizen's group, sued the Colorado Department of Health, alleging its approval process was flawed in granting Umetco Minerals Corp. a license to dispose of uranium tailings at an old processing mill in Uravan, 20 miles from the Utah border.

"I just put my hands over my heart and sang 'God Bless America,'" said Utah House Minority Whip Kelly Atkinson, D-West Jordan, after hearing of the lawsuit. "I'm thrilled."

In October, Atkinson and the rest of Utah's legislative leadership joined Gov. Mike Leavitt in sending a letter to Romer, asking him to reconsider the decision to allow the burial of up to 600,000 cubic yards of uranium tailings at Uravan, on the San Miguel River.

The San Miguel is a tributary of the Dolores River, which enters the Colorado River north of Moab. Leavitt and former Gov. Norm Bangerter have worry an accident at the Uravan site could contaminate southeastern Utah water supplies.

Colorado officials say the site is safe. Last month, the state's Health Department gave Umetco final approval to expand its disposal facility, which already contains 12 million tons of tailings.

TRADE TALK: U.S. Secretary of Commerce Ron Brown, right, addresses an audience of BYU Marriott School of Management graduate students

Friday as Rep. Bill Orton listens. Brown said trade is where the United States can see the most economic growth.

Secretary of Commerce says trade important for U.S. economic future

By JAY VERDOORN and BRADY LONG
Universe Staff Writers

The United States' future economic success will depend on innovation and change, U.S. Secretary of Commerce Ron Brown told an audience of Marriott School of Management graduate students in a meeting Friday afternoon.

He said trade, technology and telecommunications are keys to keeping America an economic leader.

Brown arrived a half hour late, due to some unexpected business.

The delay almost turned the meeting into a question-and-answer session with President Rex E. Lee. President Lee used the free time to allow the graduate students to inquire about current government and U.S. legal issues.

Trade, primarily exports, is the area where the most economic growth is possible, Brown said.

He outlined three areas the White House is concerned with: Japanese trade relations, creating multi-lateral trade agreements and promoting business and government relations.

The trade imbalance with Japan must be altered, Brown said. The United States currently has a $50 billion annual trade deficit with Japan.

He said the Clinton administration is changing tactics to end the trade imbalance.

"We have taken a more aggressive, much more proactive, much tougher stance in our trade relationships with Japan," Brown said.

The recent GATT and NAFTA agreements which limits tariffs are examples of the direction that international trade is turning, he said.

"We are moving toward a world where free trade will be the order of the day," Brown said.

Brown said the United States is being slowed down on the international market because of outdated philosophies regarding the role of government and business.

"We have been trapped in an ideological and philosophical box for the last several decades," Brown said. "It is a box that kept us from being as productive and competitive as we should be."

Brown said the government can be an important partner with business to promote international growth.

"We are not going to be able to compete in this difficult global economy unless there is this kind of partnership," Brown said.

Technology is another important area that needs government support to develop the technology and to market it, he said.

"In America we have been geniuses at creating Nobel Prize winners, but we have been less than geniuses at commercializing technologies," Brown said.

To promote the development of technologies, the Commerce Department will be tripling funds for technology research by 1996, he said.

One result of advancement of technology is the growth of telecommunications.

Brown is chairman of the National Information Infrastructure Committee. The committee is evaluating the future growth of what is being called the "information super-highway."

An important component of the committee is to ensure that all Americans will have access to the information system, he said.

Utah begins lobby for 2002 Winter Olympics

Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — The International Olympic Committee opens its general session in Lillehammer, Norway, this week, marking the prelude to the 1994 Games and the opening of a critical period in Salt Lake's bid for 2002.

While Olympians compete on the ski slopes and ice rinks, the serious competition for Utah will take place in Lillehammer's restaurants and cafes. Gold medals are not the goal of the 70-odd Utahns who will travel to Norway.

They want nothing less than the hearts and minds of the IOC delegates.

Stalking those elusive prizes will be, among others, Gov. Mike Leavitt and Salt Lake Mayor Deedee Corradini. And time is running short.

There will be just one more IOC session — Sept. 4-5 in Paris — before the IOC meets in Budapest, Hungary, in June 1995 to choose the 2002 host city.

But Lillehammer is the key event. All of the delegates will be in one place at one time for nearly two weeks.

It is the last time Utah lobbyists will be able to buttonhole delegates when they have winter sports on their minds.

"This meeting is the most important meeting in the process," said John Johnson, vice president of Salt Lake City's bid committee.

"We will have more (IOC) members who will be there for a longer period of time with less to do than at other time in the campaign," said Tom Welch, the president of Salt Lake's bid committee.

The Salt Lake City team plans to be relentless in its pursuit of delegates to whom Welch and Johnson already know well from Utah's bid for the 1998 Winter Games.

FREE DIAMONDS!

Diamonds don't grow on trees, but they do fall from the sky! Wilson Diamonds is dropping a $600 diamond from the blimp at the BYU/SDSU game Thursday night.

It's our way of saying thanks to the many loyal BYU fans that have made our business strong. (We don't mind the exposure it's giving us either.)

Of course, we've always considered the best exposure is our customers. When they tell you to go to Wilson Diamonds, we know we're doing things right. Right selection (it overwhelms people), right approach (it underwhelms people), right price (it brings broad smiles). So go to the game and enjoy. Then when it's time, go to Wilson's.

Cyclone kills 43 people in Madagascar

Associated Press

ANTANANARIVO, Madagascar — The cyclone that swept over this island nation killed at least 43 people and left more than 150,000 homeless, the Interior Ministry said Sunday.

The worst damage was in Toamasina, the country's second-largest city, where 80 percent of the homes were destroyed and 80,000 people displaced, the ministry's emergency relief office said in a communique.

Typhoon Geralda whirled across the Indian Ocean and engulfed the island on Wednesday with high winds and fierce rains. Humanitarian groups from France, the former colonizer, said they were sending relief supplies and personnel.

Officials had said previously that 11 people were killed, but the latest toll put the number at 43.

About 70,000 were left homeless in Antananarivo, the capital, emergency officials said.
